Africa needs infrastructure. This requires Africans to position themselves, possess the necessary skills and take the lead in the development, procurement, financing and implementation of infrastructure projects.

The delivery of infrastructure projects in the context of the social environment in Africa is not an easy task, it requires an appreciation of –

- the mechanisms through which governments are able to transparently and efficiently mobilise private sector funds, resources and expertise, in the delivery of public sector mandated;
- the significance of responsible governance, best practice standards of corporate governance,
- global recognition of African initiatives; and
- general prosperity for Africa.

It is this realisation that led to the positioning of Ledwaba Mazwai as one of the leading dynamic law firms in South Africa to provide legal services in infrastructure related projects and has becoming associated with some of the biggest and internationally acclaimed infrastructure projects in recent years including the Gautrain Rapid Rail Project.
